

Job Placement and Graduate Work

2018 Update

In the fall of 2018, job placement and graduate education enrollment data were collected from several LBC programs. These show that LBC graduates are employed in the field in which they majored at very high rates.

I. Education Department – 2015 to 2018 Graduates

About 80% of LBC Education students who graduated between 2015 and 2018 are employed in teaching or education-related fields, and 100% of graduates who actively looked for teaching jobs have found them.

The positions reported below were obtained just after graduation for the following school year. Most education students don't pursue graduate school immediately after finishing their undergraduate degrees; however, many of them pursue additional coursework sometime within the first five years of teaching. In order to maintain PA certification teachers must obtain 24 post-baccalaureate credits before completing 6 years of teaching.

IV. Employment Data from the 2016 Alumni Survey

An alumni survey, open to all graduates of Lancaster School of the Bible, Washington Bible College, Capital Bible Seminary, Capital Seminary and Graduate School, and Lancaster Bible College (here collectively referred to as “LBC alumni”) was conducted in January of 2016. Among its purposes was to gather employment data and to gauge how alumni view the skills they acquired at LBC|Capital. Eighty-four graduates responded.

About 40% of responding alumni reported that their current employment was in the field in which they majored at LBC, with another 13% working in a field that had been their minor. Just over 41% were working in a field not related to their LBC major or minor. About 13% were in graduate school, most of those (66.7%) pursuing a degree related to their LBC major or minor.

Just over 50% of survey respondents had a Bachelor’s as their highest degree. About 33% had earned a Master’s degree, and about 3% had earned a doctorate. Another 3% had a graduate certificate, and about 6% earned an undergraduate certificate.

Almost 50% answered “No” when asked if they had attended graduate school after graduating from LBC. About 21% attended or were attending LBC|Capital or Capital Bible Seminary, and another 30% attended another graduate institution. Ninety-five percent answered “No” when asked if they had to complete any additional undergraduate courses to gain full admission to their graduate program.

Over 74% of the alumni responding to this survey were employed full-time, 16.1% were employed part-time, and 9.7% were unemployed by choice, which leaves only 1.6% seeking employment. Just over 8% were pursuing additional education.
